WORCESTER, MASSACHUSETTS

UPDATED JUNE 2026

BiftuSpark funds a practical education access package: books, learning materials, study support planning, basic digital access, local coordination, and public donor updates. The first learning hub budget gives donors a concrete way to fund useful work without broad or unsupported impact claims.

$5KGroundwork gift

Consultation, partner conversations, first materials, and administrative setup.

$10KFirst hub package

A balanced package for books, materials, coordination, access planning, and reporting.

$25KCatalytic support

Deeper coverage for materials, logistics, reporting, contingency, and partner coordination.

Why this work matters

Students need more than classroom time. They need books they can use, a place to study, learning materials that match local needs, and basic digital access planning that can grow responsibly.

Uses of funds

- Books and learning materials.
- Local coordination with schools, families, and community stakeholders.
- Digital access planning and responsible equipment assumptions.
- Operations, recordkeeping, communication, transfers, transport, and vendor coordination.
- Public updates, proof notes, basic media documentation, and reporting preparation.
- Contingency for price changes, delivery issues, and implementation constraints.

Proof path

Support should leave a paper trail. BiftuSpark separates budget assignment, planning decisions, purchases, field media, and next milestones. Public updates should show confirmed activity and spending categories.

100% clarity model

BiftuSpark does not claim a charity: water-style 100% public donation model. The current commitment is 100% clarity: name operating costs, assign public gifts to visible budget categories, and report what happened. A stricter public-donation model requires documented operating sponsors.
